BEHOLD, THE LIGHT MAN COMETH

With the hue and cry of conservation of energy, one has to approach with caution the means of conservation. If we are not careful, we might be opening up another can of worms, and instead of solving one of the major problems, we just might be creating some insurmountable ones.

In Los Angeles they are considering plans to turn off all power in certain grid areas for four hours at a time. This means that hospitals will have to use their own generators, thereby increasing the utilization of fuels. This means that homes with hot water heaters, using pilot lights, will become fire hazards, thereby creating some additional problems for the fire departments. Burglary criminals will have a field day in those areas, creating problems for police.

In order to compensate for these measures, these departments will have to increase their man power to meet the emergency.

The transit systems are planning mass cutbacks in their scheduling which will quadtriple the total number of automobiles on the highways, creating additional smog problems. The Highway Patrol and other law enforcement bodies must increase their number of personnel to meet this emergency.

Airlines are already cutting back their schedules, thus creating problems for commuters to and from their various places of employment. Some will have to find work and homes in other areas because of the lack of transportation, thereby creating tax problems for the present existing cities.

The Monterey Unified School District's Superintendent James Harrison is posed with a major problem concerning the district's 550-plus classrooms. In trying to conserve energy, the district is considering turning out all lights in the classrooms during unoccupancy. The schools throughout the country have been the victims of vandalism, petty thefts and burglaries, when there were was no energy crisis, by what stretch of the imagination can we assume that crimes in these areas will not increase.

Patrick Malone, assistant business manager for the district, stated that vandalism had dropped in the district from $58,000 three years ago, to $36,000 with the classroom lights remaining on. How long will this remain at the lower figure with the lights out.

Superintendent Harrison made it emphatically clear that if a severe fuel shortage occurs, busing for field trips and athletics would be the first to be curtailed. If this occurs in the Monterey Unified School District, you can be assured that similar action will be taken by all School Districts. So what happens to college football and basketball?

The supply of diesel fuel was suddently cut by 15 percent to the school district, and all of the school buses use diesel fuel. What will happen to the school's busing program?

If the lights are left off, Harrison said the district may ask parent and community groups that use schools for meetings, to meet in the late afternoon, rather than night hours during the week, or during the day on weekends to conserve electricity.

The reduction of temperatures in the classrooms will incur many illnesses and may lead to serious complicating diseases in the school system during the transition.

It has occurred to me, as well as many readers, that there must be another way. I pose this question, is there really an energy shortage, or is this another attempt by the oil industry to force the independent station owners out of business, while reaping a harvest of profits by the increase in prices for this alleged oil shortage? Shouldn't Congress intensify their investigative powers and really dig into this, before these drastic steps, that will affect so many American citizens, are instituted?

This can of worms which we have carelessly opened and glanced at, may not be the harmless earth worms we considered, but just may be a can of maggots. This is something to think about.

OH YES, IF THERE IS SUCH AN ENERGY CRISIS IN THIS COUNTRY, HOW IS IT THAT WE HAVE ENOUGH TO SELL TO MEXICO?

Ross Announces Candidacy For Mayor Of Seaside

Stephen E. Ross, Vice Mayor of Seaside, recently announced his candidacy for mayor at a press conference held at City Hall.

Mr. Ross cited 7 major goals that he would "work with all of the energy at my command to accomplish."

"I will continue the orderly development of our city, including the completion of Gateway Auto Center; completion of Hannon and Del Monte Heights; the La Guna Grande Project; the Post Office project; building of a good library; and building a better and stronger Recreation Program, including expansion of the facilities.

"I shall continue the work of uniting the people of Seaside, and motivating them to have more pride in and care for one another," he said. "My efforts to bring this about will include, but not be limited to hire Seaside residents FIRST, subject to feasibility, as a policy of the city, and encourage businesses operating in Seaside to do the same.

"Buy in Seaside First, as a policy of the city, and encourage Seaside citizens to do the same.

"Improve our education and work to develop a Peninsula-wide policy of utilizing HOME GROWN TALENT."

Ross stated that it is his intent to work for the development of a comprehensive social services delivery system in Seaside. With reference to this, Mr. Ross said:

"By this I do not mean that I believe that the city should have direct responsibility for the operation of all Social Services programs. I do believe, however, that our city should assume the responsibility for identifying all social needs of our city and for planning, coordinating and evaluating programs to alleviate social problems within our city. By serving as an advocate or catalyst our city should assure the deliverance of all essential social services to its citizens through appropriate private and/or public agencies," he said.

He stated the city should address the social services element farther than the manpower element. He will reccommend that this element include Health Services, Dependency Avoidance Services, Transportation Services, Justice, Rehabilitation and Protective services, Individual and family services, and leisure services.

His main thrust, if elected, would be to reduce crime in Seaside. With reference to this reduction, he said he would reduce crime by "working to reduce the flow of crime generating material and activity into our city, and bring about better coordination and cooperation between the individuals and families of Seaside and members of our Police Department."

He promises to hold spending down to a minimum required to deliver the needed services. And work for an adequate and equitable revenue base.

Mr. Ross further stated: I shall work to maintain an adequate standard and balance is maintained in all environmental fields, in air, land use, water, solid waste, open space and noise. Of this group, Land Use is, in my opinion, he said, "the most critical at this time in this city. Our use of it, affects all of the other items. I shall work to update and study land use and re-use to provide the best possible living for the citizens of Seaside from the use of the limited land that we have," he said.

Festival Of Trees Is Scheduled

Traditionally, each year before Christmas, the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art is transformed into a pine-scented forest of decorated ever-green trees.

In the Main Gallery, paintings and sculpture give way to yet another art form -- hand-crafted ornaments created by committee members throughout the year.

The fifth annual Festival of the Trees and Christmas Creation exhibit is scheduled for Nov. 30, Dec. 1-2, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Open to the public, the Festival will feature a melange of Yuletide ornaments, gourmet foods, and gift items.

Workshop members have been busy since February creating original decorations for more than 30 trees, many of which are sold to local businesses.

The gourmet "country store" will be stocked with home-made baked goods, jams, jellies and kitchen necessities such as aprons, crocks, spoons and pot-holders.

A boutique will sell hand-made gift items and many small decorated trees. On Sat., from 10:30 until 4:20, a special show for children will be held. Coffee and refreshments are offered daily, and on Sunday between 2 and 5 p.m., guests will be welcomed with a holiday Wassail Bowl. Carolers will serenade. Donation: adults, $1.50; children, 50¢.

A drawing for a special "alphabet" decorated tree will be held on Sunday at 5 p.m. Donation, 50¢.

The Museum is located at 559 Pacific St., Monterey. For further incall 372-5477.

New Minimum Wage Sought

A new minimum wage for California's working men and women, apprentices and students, has been proposed by the State Industrial Welfare Commission.

Industrial Welfare Commission Chairman Theodore J. Todd announced a $2.00 an hour minimum wage sacle for adults, $1.80 for apprentices or learners, and $1.70 for minors or student workers.

"Such a proposal places California in the leadership role of recommending the highest minimum wage scale of any state in the nation," Todd said.

He also pointed out the Commission will issue two sets of orders: one for the new minimum wage scale, and another for hours and working conditions for workers. This was done to alleviate any delay in the crucial need for an increase in the minimum wage.

The action was a result of passage of a new law which gives the Commission jurisdiction over extension of minimum hours and working conditions to men, orders for which cannot become effective until May 1974.

Under the new order, the new minimum wage can become effective March 1, 1974.

Todd said the Commission retained the youth differential because of the 90,000 students in the California Work Experience Program, and a lower minimum wage rate enhances youth employment opportunities because of disadvantages and risks associated with hiring young people (uninformed work habits, jobs changed frequently, and special scheduling required for part-time work).

In setting the new wage scale, Todd said, "it is the lawful function of the Industrial Welfare Commission to set a minimum wage adequate to supply the necessary costs of proper living and to maintain the health and welfare of a single individual."

"It is also proper that we comply with the intent of the Legislature to interpret the provisions in a manner which does not cause undue hardship and loss of employment opportunities in any segment of industry in California," he said.

The new Industrial Welfare Commission Order will apply to all persons engaged in various industries and occupations, whether paid on a time, piece rate, commission or other basis, with few exceptions.

The Order will not apply, however, to certain categories, including student nurses in accredited schools or by the Board of Vocational Nurse and Psychiatric Technician Examiners, or by provisions of certain sections of the Business and Professions Code.

It will likewise not apply to outside salesmen, baby-sitters, professional actors or actresses, or to apprentices regularly indentured under the State Division of Apprenticeship Standards.

Todd said the minimum wage and reporting time provisions will not be applied to an employer

Breakthroughs In Diabetes Research Are Announced

Not since the discovery of insulin in 1921 have the prospects been brighter for significant breakthroughs in diabetes research. Several of the more promising research leads have been announced by the Northern California Diabetes Association.

Probably the most promising avenue of research that may lead to a cure for diabetes is the work on the transplantation of beta cells, the cells of the pancreas which produce insulin. Some diabetics seem to have too few beta cells to meet their bodies' insulin demand. Others may have a normal number, but the cells do not release enough insulin. Still others do not adequately utilize the insulin their beta cells produce. The goal of the transplants is to restore the body's ability to manufacture and release the hormone in sufficient amounts.

Diabetic rats have been cured by transplanting beta cells from nondiabetic newborn rats. The transplanted cells have spread through the rodents' bodies, establishing themselves in muscle, liver, fat, the abdominal wall and other tissues and, beyond doubt, have cured the animals' diabetes.

Just as a human may reject a transplanted heart or kidney, however, the rats' bodies eventually reject the transplanted beta cells unless the cells come from rats of the same, highly inbred strain. Nonetheless, it has been shown that tissue loses its susceptibility to rejection after it has been kept in a laboratory culturing medium for a time before transplantation. This culturing technique may solve the rejection problem and the last barrier to human trials will be removed.

Although much more work remains to be done, particularly in the area of rejection of the beta cell implants, the approach is expected to be ready for human trials within the next five years. The ultimate question is whether the transplanting method can prevent the complications of diabetes, which include blindness, kidney failure and blood vessel disorders. These complications are not controlled adequately by insulin injections and may be caused by factors not related to insulin output or high blood sugar.

90 YEARS - That's the combined number of years three civilian employees have been working at Fort Ord. They are, from left: Jack B. Kinikin, warehouse foreman who lives in Salinas; Porter M. Dansby, who works in commissary warehouse and lives in Seaside; and Norbert V. Pietras, truck driver from Carmel Valley. Colonel J. R. McCune, right, director of industrial operations, made the awards.

Plays Active Part In Navy Goals

What's it like to be black ... or Filipino ... or some other minority? The Naval Postgraduate School is developing a master's degree program in human resources management and basic educational courses for other curricula to investigate this question and others as meaningful.

This two-part program is being planned as an adjunct to the Navy-wide Human Goals Plan which is designed to insure the development of the Navy's human resources to guarantee the right of each individual to achieve at his potential.

Candidates for the master's degree will be able to specialize in one of four areas: organizational development and management, intercultural relations, race relations, and drug and alcohol education. Students in other curricula may take basic courses in the same four areas as electives.

The purpose behind these two programs (the master's degree and basic educational program), is to give master's degree candidates background in order to make more effective decisions in human goals matters.

Governor Honors Quadriplegic

California Health and Welfare Secretary Earl Brian recently announced that Daniel W. Monzingo, a lawyer from San Diego, is the winner of the Governor's Award as Rehabilitant of the Year.

Monzingo, a quadriplegic who can only move one finger, was officially honored in Fresno on Oct. 11 in connection with a meeting of the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped.

"Mr. Monzingo's rehabilitation is a remarkable story," Brian said. "He not only survived an almost fatal automobile accident but through sheer determination overcame severe physical handicaps to return to productive life."

Monzingo, 27, was selected for the Governor's Award from among the 15,058 Californians who have been rehabilitated by the State Department of Rehabilitation during the past fiscal year. He was judged to be the most deserving of recognition based on his own efforts toward rehabilitation with the counseling of the Department's vocational rehabilitation staff.

The panel judging the nominations was composed of William R. Kugler, San Leandro businessman and chairman of the Rehabilitation Department's advisory committee; W.C. Bradshaw, Fresno businessman and chairman of the Governor's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, and Alan C. Nelson, Director of the Department of Rehabilitation.

Why do Christian concepts endure?

The qualities expressed by Jesus have influenced men through the ages. Though frequently trampled upon, these gentle attributes emerge unharmed.

What is their remarkable strength?

When you're met with another's forgiveness, meekness, and unselfed love, why is it that your own bitterness fades?

There is a book which explores the penetrating effect on men's lives of these simple expressions of good. It speaks of the timeless spiritual laws which underlie these Christian qualities.

Admitting Minorities Enriches Education

Detroit -- Minority admissions policies enrich rather than erode the quality of education, University of Michigan President Robben W. Fleming said (recently) in an address before the Economic Club of Detroit.

Speaking on the U-M's experience, President Fleming emphasized that, while some additional steps are taken to allow educationally disadvantaged students to enroll at Michigan, all students must meet a "threshold level of qualification for admission."

Consequently, he explained, the dropout rate for minority students at the U-M is not significantly different from that of their peers, the needs of society are being served, and the quality of education at Michigan is being maintained.

The foremost problem in maintaining minority admissions, President Fleming added, is adequate financial help.

The U-M president noted last week's New York Times article, which reported that a survey of deans, placed Michigan among the nation's top four universities in the quality of its graduate-professional programs.

"That quality is not, as some would suggest, being eroded by our minority admissions policy," Fleming said. "On the contrary, it is taking on an added dimension of compassion and understanding. For if the policy succeeds, as we believe that it will, our American society will be better for it and the status of the University will be greater than ever."

While some of the interest in minority programs at universities arises from the demands of militant groups, a substantial part of it is also the result of an appeal to both the conscience and enlightened self-interest of the country, Fleming continued.

President Fleming noted that "many fine minority students come to universities in a routine manner" but that other minority students tend to be concentrated in secondary schools which may have academic standards lower than those of better schools. They tend also to come from poorer families which have not had a background of academic success.

"If the qualifications of 'disadvantaged' students were considered on a straight competitive basis with all other applicants," he said, "a good many would not be admitted. On the other hand, to deny admission to majority students who were more highly qualified in the traditional sense, while at the same time admitting less qualified minority students, posed some inequities."

In the face of this dilemma, the U-M as early as in 1962 decided that "it would be wise social policy to give some special consideration to disadvantaged students" and embarked on a program which from 1962 to 1969 raised enrollment of Black students from less than one per cent to about three-and-one-half per cent, Fleming explained.

In the fall of 1969, he continued, the University was "prepared to double minority enrollments within the next four years" to 7 per cent. "While we were considering the expanded program, the Black students on campus formed an organization which pressed for a goal of 10 per cent. The objective of the Black students had strong support from white students.

"The outcome was an agreement under which the University did set a more or less arbitrary 10 per cent goal by the fall of 1973. The University nevertheless hinged its commitment on providing sufficient financial aid rather than on lowering admissions standards. This was never fully understood by the public and has for that reason sometimes been a cause of sharp criticism."

President Fleming explained that adequate test scores and grades plus recommendations of the high school counselor are consulted in assuring that minority students meet the University's threshold of admission. Such a policy, he added, protects the entering students.

New Bill Endorsed By HRC

The Human Rights Commission recently voted unanimous endorsement of H.R. 9895, a bill which would provide American "gateway cities" -- such as San Francisco -- with funds for educational, employment, and other assistance progams to benefit immigrant and foreign-born populations.

The bill, introduced in the last Session of the Congress by Representative Patsy T. Mink, a Democrat of Hawaii, is pending before the House Committee on Education and Labor.

Grants would be made by the U.S. Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare to carry out programs of education, health, housing, job training, orientation, public assistance, and other activities for the benefit of immigrants.

In addition, the Mink bill authorizes Public Health Service treatment for immigrants, Food Stamps, travel grants of up to $250 per immigrant to travel from a gateway city to another State for employment purposes, job referral, etc.

The HRC, said, Director William Becker, has been working quietly for some time to get the Federal government to recognize the need for this kind of funding for gateway cities, based on its record of having spent some $800 million since 1961 for Cuban immigrants to Florida.

Get Xmas Club Checks

With the holiday season just around the corner, a record $104,193,963 in Christmas Club checks, including $193,404 for Seaside depositors is being distributed this month by Bank of America to more than 400,000 Californians.

In making the announcement Vice President and Manager R. Dobson said the number of account holders at the Seaside ofice came to 676, the average account totaling $277. For Monterey County 4,944 people saved $1,244,158.

All told, 206,094 Northern Californians saved $52,-054,769 under the Christmas Club plan this year, while 207,087 residents of Southern California put away $52,139,194. For the state 413,181 Californians particpated in the program for an average of $252 per account. This year's total represents an increase of 3.5 percent over the 1972 high.

"Most of this money will end up as packages under the Christmas tree," said Dobson, "but some savers will also use their checks to pay for other year end expenses like property taxes and insurance premiums."

Program To Support Minority Institutions

The National Science Foundation (NSF) seeks proposals for its new Research Initiation for Minority Institution Improvement program and has just published a Guide for Preparation of Proposals.

The program is designed to improve science education, to help the nation work towards equal educational opportunity, and to capitalize on the unique national resource represented by institutions founded to serve disadvantaged ethnic minorities.

NSF plans to award research initiation grants for those full-time faculty members at institutions founded to serve disadvantaged ethnic minorities who have had no substantial research support. The deadline for the submission of proposals is December 15, 1973.

Projects will normally be supported for a maximum period of 15 months -- two summers and one academic year -- with a maximum award of $20,-000. Proposals will be considered in all fields of science, including the social sciences, engineering, and mathematics. Grant funds may be used to defray the costs of research including salaries, student and technical assistants, supplies, equipment, travel and field expenses, publication costs, computer time, and attendance at scientific meetings related to the research. Research initiation grants are not renewable.

The new program has been broadened to include faculty at two-year institutions as well as those from colleges and universities. In addition to predominantly Black colleges and universities, the program also includes institutions founded to serve other disadvantaged ethnic minorities.

The Foundation expects to support approximately 60 projects with awards totaling $1 million. Awards are scheduled to be announced in mid-May 1974.

Dear Better Business Bureau,
This is to inform you that I have received a check in the amount of $48.28 as full refund for the order in question. Thank you very much.
Your prompt and efficient response to my complaint was, indeed, gratifying. It greatly bolstered my confidence in the American way of doing business, but also taught me to check with the Better Business Bureau before transacting future business deals with unknown companies.
Yours for a better and prosperous America.

Two officials of Hoomesburg Prison in Philadelphia, Pa., were stabbed to death on May 31. Two Black Muslim inmates have been charged with the murders and Philadelphia's Mayor Frank Rizzo said, "Why not?"

He said lifers in prison have nothing more to lose; it's open season on prison guards.

He said the knife murders of Warden Patrick Curran and Deputy Warden Robert F. Fromhold are evidence of why capital punishment must be reinstated.

It has been, by 13 states.

When the Supreme Court ruled "against the death penalty" last year, the court itself was in wide disagreement. Each of the nine justices filed a separate opinion.

The five-justice majority was divided: Only two of them ruled the death penalty was per se "cruel and unusual punishment"; the other three ruled it was unconstitutional because of the erratic way in which it is imposed.

But Chief Justice Burger specifically advises state legislatures that they might meet the court's objections merely by being consistent and making judges and juries consistent -- by specifying mandatory death sentences for certain crimes.

The National Association of Attorneys General has further asserted any state's right to impose capital punishment and agreed the best way to do it is to make death mandatory for specific offenses.

So two states last year and 11 more this year, voted to revive the death penalty.

Probably the first High Court test of these laws will come from Florida, where a trial judge last March decreed that state's new law "unconstitutional."

With crimes against the person so prevalent, any "softening" of the law at first appears masochistic.

But no American has been executed since 1967, largely due to the inconsistency of the laws which the Supreme Court criticized. Some 600 men were waiting in death row in 31 states -- many for many years -- while the courts re-reconsidered complicated appeals.

The Supreme Court is trying to force uniformity and consistency by its 1972 decree.

If your state does wish to reinstate capital punishment, the consensus of attorneys general is that it should specify death for the following crimes: for the murder of a police officer, a corrections officer, or a fireman on duty. Murder by malicious use of a bomb; Murder by a person convicted previously of murder; Murder by any person under life imprisonment; Murder committed furing a rape; Murder resulting from the hijacking of any public vehicle; Multiple slayings; Murder of a public official.

These crimes your state can discourage now.

It's no secret that government on every level has been checking out the possibility of both local and regional mass transit systems. Both environmental and ecological considerations make them a desirable ... and in many cases a NECESSARY, alternative to the private automobile in getting TO and getting AROUND our metropolitan areas. The current Joint Powers Transportation Agency, here on the Monterey Peninsula, it a good example. But the Joint Powers' Busses, operating on limited funds, cannot solve ALL of the transportation problems of EACH community they serve.

Officials in Pacific Grove, like other cities, realized that ... and P-G Mayor Bob Quinn had for some time, been considering the possibility of smaller busses, on local routes, to cut down on traffic and all its related problems, and to reach those residents who could not easily get to a J-P-A route. City officials had been checking with manufacturers on the prices of smaller busses, when they noticed an ad in Western Cities Magazine, which is published by the League of California Cities. The advertisement was for three used 17-passenger busses, at a comparatively reasonable price of 62-hundred dollars each.

Anyone familiar with government -- at almost any level -- is aware of just how long it can take to institute a new program ... but the Pacific Grove officials, realizing the opportunity presented by that ad, moved with surprising speed. Within a week, they dispatched their chief mechanic to check out those busses ... got his favorable report ... and purchased two of them. Within two weeks, the P-G City Council had not only authorized that purchase ... but had made the necessary changes in the city's laws to create a bus line. They hope that the busses will be rolling before the end of this month, with no fare to be charged until the first of the year.

In this age of agenda sessions ... feasability studies and red tape, it was refreshing to watch the speed with which the Pacific Grove Municipal Bus Line moved from concept to reality.

KIDD congratulates Mayor Quinn, the P-G Council, and the City Staff, for their recognition of that opportunity ... and for the dispatch with which they pursued it. They have set an example for other city officials to follow, in their creation of "the mini-monarch." We hope that Pacific Grove residents will try the new service when it hits the street, and make the "mini-monarch" a success, just as quickly as their city officials made it a reality.

Mills Wants Increase For 523,000 Aged

California's 523,000 aged, blind and disabled could have their monthly grants reduced to $130 beginning in January, warns Senate President pro Tempore James R. Mills (D-San Diego).

Defeat of legislation which would have increased grant levels to $230 for aged and disabled recipients and to $240 for the blind, could disqualify California for HR 1 funds.

The Legislature and the Governor have been at odds over the increase due the aged, blind and disabled. The administration wants to limit increases to $221 monthly, but no higher.

"The administration," Mills says, "is condemning persons on fixed incomes to a vicious cycle of poverty. It wants to increase grants, but only to a level, in today's fluctuating market and increased costs of living, keeps them in poverty."

While legislative experts claim that only legislation will enable California to implement the increase benefits of HR 1, the administration asserts that HR 1 can be implemented administratively without legislation.

Calling the treatment of the aged, blind and disabled a disgrace, Mills urged the Legislature to act quickly upon its return to pass legislation which would implement HR 1 and increase grants if the courts rule against the administration.

The absence of legislative action, Mills says, has led to court challenges of proposed administrative action and could place increased benefits to the aged, blind and disabled in doubt. Even the state's controller has expressed doubts as to whether an increase could be passed on without legislative action.

Mills said continued pressure from aged, blind and disabled persons and groups concerned for their welfare will do much to convince legislators to vote in favor of funding bills in January if the court rules they must do so.

"The burden now is clearly one of conscience," Mills said. "The plight of the aged, blind and disabled must be considered in human terms rather than solely in fiscal benefits."

As I See It

by Mel Vercoe

In a way we should be grateful to Mr. Nixon for bringing to our attention, on international TV, the interesting observation that he is not a crook. Those who missed that point during his speech to the newspaper editors group, must have been out in the kitchen, because he said it very clearly, and he said it right after a rehash of his previous explanations of how there was nothing at all remiss in his behavior as President. Immediately following his speech, some quite intelligent sounding news analysts pointed out a few obvious contradictions, so we probably all have the same doubts about the President's veracity as before his speech.

However, the whole thing brought out the need for doing something about the loopholes in the general guide, known as Constitution. After 180 years most of the wording of it remains as originally written, but the world has changed, America has changed, and there was just no way that the original writers of said Constitution could foresee that we would some day have leaders like Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon, who would use every imaginable means to change our subvert the interpretation to suit their own particular wishes. Nor would those original framers believe their eyes if they could see Congress and the Supreme Court allowing such things to happen.

Thus, we need revision to put the original intents into airtight terms that will spell out clerly and exactly who has authority to do what, and without a whole barrelfull of ifs, ands, buts and whereases. And maybe Richard Nixon, certainly without wanting such a thing to happen, brought us a little closer to the happy day when people start thinking about America first and somebody's corporate profits second.

Many Congressmen would likely support such a needed revision. During recent weeks I have mailed roughly three hundred Nixon impeachment petitions to members of Congress, and by the response I have received, these Congressmen fully recognize the danger of allowing Mr. Nixon to remain in charge another three years. Some have very plainly expressed to me that, they at first opposed his removal, but now see no alternative.

However, removing Mr. Nixon would not be enough. America is still young. There will be more Lyndon Johnsons and more Richard Nixons during the next century or two, and without ironclad guidelines to control them, our descendants may very well wind up learning how to goosestep on their way to school.

AMBAG

The Association of Monterey Bay Area Governments has proven to be something less than effective as a REGIONAL Planning agency for the original three counties that formed it. San Benito County, Hollister and San Juan Bautista have discontinued membership.

Last month, a meeting, held in Monterey on Friday, October 12, 1973, the future AMBAG certification or "umbrella" role was discussed with State, Federal, and local minicipal representatives. The meeting was called by AMBAG pursuant to a letter addressed to them by HUD dated September 20, 1973.

The problems discussed at the October 12, 1973 meeting concerned three related subjects. First, the decertification of AMBAG by HUD; second, the Urban Mass Transportation Administration's belief that it is inconsistent for them to fund AMBAG to do transportation planning while the State recognizes our Local Transportation Commission as a Transportation Planning Agency; and third, the upcoming request of the Federal Highway Administration to the Governor for the designation of a recipient of Federal Highway money for local purposes as required in the 1973 Federal Highway Act. (Bureaucracy is complicated!)

Although AMBAG admittedly has many shortcomings, it status quo should be maintained. The alternative would be to form a single COG with the accompanying time consuming organizational delays that woudl surely ensue. By preserving AMBAG we would continue to support it and could have a viable agency to serve all our local needs.

The preferred solution should be to continue with the present organization of AMBAG as a multipurpose two county COG with the two Local Transportation Commissions responsible for transportation planning. With a clear indication of support for AMBAG by each of its members, the Federal and State Agencies would not easily withhold certification on any grants whether it be for library, sewage, water, transportation, or other categories.

I recommend that since we've all paid our dues for AMBAG, we also continue its existence.

Letter To The Editor

Editor,

We turn the pages of our newspaper and we read of serious crimes committed on peaceable citizens. Decent folks are robbed, slugged, raped, and killed.

Some shrug it all off. As long as they are not the victims, they do not care. Some have glib explanations for the dirty work. They find excuses, why some are nasty crooks and savages, preying on good people. They blame the ones the criminals go after! They shed a Pacific Ocean of crocodile tears for the nasty law-violater but not a drop for his victim! So life has addled the brains of some, what a tragedy!

When such corkscrew-thinking citizens get on a jury that will trial a person, facts mean little. All the evidence in the world against a defendant, makes no impression on such a jury. They free the rascal, often with the consoling thought' "The poor soul! Not he, but society is to blame! Especially the police for arresting him!" Or, such a jury cooks up a "religious" explanation: "Only God Can Judge," etc. Presumely we must sit still, be robbed, killed.

Law-abiding folks - those who don't attack and harm their neighbors - are happy when a costly trial results in a jury with sound minds saying: "The evidence indicates you are guilty, and we so find you - defendent." Recently, such was the case in a trial of a notorious killer, raper, and torturer, who murdered at least eight persons.

Citizens kept their fingers crossed! What would the Judge do? Some act unpredictable, one wonders if they have concern for the decent public, for law-and-order. Well a judge did act, after the jury declared a person guilty of many killings, and how he acted!

He sentenced the man in legal jargon "for life" on each of eight murders. What does "for life" mean in tricky legal phraseology? It means that a culprit is eligible for parole in seven years! Kill a person, and it is possible for the killer to be free in few years while his victim is dead forever; no parole for the murdered-one back to life!

Nay more! His Honor, made the eight sentences, of "for life", run concurrently - all at the same time - instead of consecutively, one after the other. So for eight of the most degrading, vicious, cruel crimes of decapitated-heads, cut-up bodies, cannibalistic practices, rapes and torture, the degraded human beast gets off so lightly, that he may be on the streets carrying on in the same fashion after seven years, with a little luck in winning a parole!

Is this Justice? Is this what our forefathers meant by democracy? Or is this stupidity, hypocrisy? Dangerous misuse of public confidence, that through the machinery of the law is painfully slow, it grinds sure and will protect honest and moral folks from the wild, unfair and dangerous ones in a society?

Is it any surprise that the culprit and his attorney gushed out words of thanks in court?

George Herman, Marina

Editor:

Did you know that in 1946 the Congress gave the United Nations a blank check (payable on demand) on your taxes? It reads: "Authorized to be appropriated annually to the Dept. of State, our of the Treasury ... such sums as may be necessary for the payment by the United States of its share of the expenses of the United Nations as apportioned by the General Assembly..." In other words, the United Nations sets the amount the U.S. should give! How about that?

This stupid act has cost us a total of $4 Billion 700 Million; or about $416,681.48 per day for 27 years. In the calendar year 1972 it cost us a total of $351,445,000! This blank check Congressional act also gave the President authority to give the United Nations additional funds. Of the 132 nations in the U.S., 87 are in arrears on their dues!

This U. N. windbag organization passes worthless, hypocritical, unrealistic resolutions, piously condemns little Israel and Rhodesia, but overlooks the Russian and Chinese dictatorships. It interferes in the internal affairs of other countries, which is absolutely contrary to its own charter.

The time has finally come to end this phony panhandler -- the United Nations.

Pass the word!

Sincerely,

MPC Arts And Crafts Fair Set

The greater mobility of handicapped students at Monterey Peninsula College is the goal of three college organizations which are planning an auction of donated goods and an Arts and Crafts Fair on December 8.

The Circle K Club and the Handicapped Students of MPC are jointly trying to raise money to purchase two trams or golf carts in order to help physically limited students get to and from classes, according to Ms. Nadine Davis, a counselor for handicapped students.

"We are asking the public and local business to contribute items to the auction which will take place in the College Center from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Being held concurrently with the auction is an Arts and Crafts Fair at the center," said Ms. Davis.

Shigemi Matsumoto, young Japanese-American soprano, will be presented by the Monterey Peninsula Concert Association on Friday evening, November 30th, at 8:15 p.m. at the Pacific Grove Junior High School auditorium.

Receiving her education in Los Angeles, Miss Matsumoto earned her B.A. in Vocal Performance. In swift succession she was elected to "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities"; was regional winner of the Metropolitan Opera auditions while only twenty years old; at 21 won the San Francisco Opera National Auditions and her first contract from a major opera company; was chosen Japanese Woman of the Year for Southern California; and just recently received a major grant from the National Opera Institute.

Performing leading roles with several opera companies, including San Francisco, Portland, Augusta and San Diego, Miss Matsumoto can now count almost thirty major roles in nearly twenty operas; Micaela in Carmen, both Mimi and Musetta in La Boheme, Pamina and Papagena in Die Zauberflote, the Burgundian Lady in Carmina Burana, and Rosina in Barbiere di Siviglia, to mention a few.

In addition, Shigemi Matsumoto appeared as opening guest artist with Arthur Fiedler in his San Francisco "Pops" concerts, sang at the 25th Anniversary Celebration of the Founding of the United Nations, and has appeared with several symphony orchestras, including the San Francisco Symphony under Seiji Ozawa.

A gifted musician and natural actress possessing a radiant voice and charming personality, the San Francisco Chronicle states "with such obvious blessings, Miss Matsumoto's voice and destiny can hardly avoid growing to exciting powers".

Attendance at the concert is limited to members of the association, and to members of similar associations on a space available basis.

Nixon OKs Oil Pipeline

Washington -- With only perfunctory debate, the Senate approved the Alaska pipeline bill last Monday and sent it to President Nixon. The vote was 80-5.

On Friday, the President signed the bill into law, thus restarting the stalled project to lay a 48-inch pipeline for oil across 789 miles between the North Slope of Alaska and the port of Valdez, where tankers will then transport the oil to West Coast refineries.

If there are no unexpected delays, oil may be expected to start flowing through the pipeline by 1977.

Joint Solution Is Urged

New York -- International business leaders meeting here at this week's 60th National Foreign Trade Convention have issued an appeal for the world's major energy-consuming nations to seek joint solutions and avoid disruptive competition for available supplies of oil and gas.

The business experts urged that the consumer nations help the oil-producing nations to diversify their industries and to invest surplus capital in the so-called "energy-hungry" nations.

The president of Japan's Sony Corporation, Akio Morita, told a luncheon meeting that the energy-consuming nations must develop new ways of using raw materials efficiently and must strive to find new sources of energy.

Predicts Lifestyle Change

Cleveland -- Edmund J. Turk, chairman of the Ohio Public Utilities Commission, predicts a radical change in lifestyle of Americans because of the energy crunch.

"We may have to close the schools this December, January and February," says Turk. "You mark what I'm saying here tonight. Maybe you'll remember it when you are eating breakfast in your kitchen wearing an overcoat and earmuffs.

"A lot of factories are going to close and when they do you're going to see people begging the government to take the fuel away from their houses so the factories can stay open."

San Francisco BART Termed Big Success

With the enormous success of the newly opened San Francisco intra-city line BART patrons system wide will now be making well over a million trips a month.

In its first week of operation in San Francisco, BART trains carried approximately 165,000 patrons, easily meeting the patronage forecast for the limited 7.5-mile service. The bulk of the ridership consists of commuters and mid-day downtown shoppers. BART officials had estimated that with the opening of the San Francisco line, patronage for the entire operating system would double. Service in the east bay, comprising the Richmond-Fremont and Concord lines, presently reaches an average of 35,000 rides a day.

Travel patterns on the new line showed Friday's patronage to be a 60 percent increase over patronage for Monday, the first day of service. On Monday the San Francisco line carried 27,300 patrons, many coming from Daly City and points south. On Tuesday that number rose to 34,000 and Thursday the figure had reached a peak of 36,500 with Friday showing a dip to 32,900.

In ratio to the total patronage, the morning and evening commute ridership also rose significantly from the first day of service.

Taking the count at BART's downtown Civic Center station only, the morning commute jumped from 4,836 on Monday to 7,768 on Friday while the evening commute more than doubled from 5,264 on Monday evening to 10,500 for Friday evening. These counts were taken between the hours of 7 a.m. and 9 a.m., and 4 p.m. and 6 p.m. and are considered to be commute figure indicators.

EARLY CHRISTMAS -- One of Santa's favorite helpers, Georgette Gamble, helps distribute Bank of America Christmas Club checks in plenty of time for early holiday shopping. More than 400,000 Californians will receive a total of $104,193,963 this month.

ARMY RECRUITER

Hello everybody,

This week's article is going to be informative news on three different opportunities in TODAY'S ARMY. TODAY'S ARMY plans to conduct a special enlistment program known as "Operation Holiday" during the month of December. The program guarantees special Christmas leave to men and women who enlist in the Army during the month of December. Persons who enlist between December 1 and December 19 will be given leave from their basic training post. Those enlisting between Dec. 20 and Dec. 31 can be granted leave after processing through the Armed Forces Entrance and Examining Station. This program also entitles new enlistees to all the benefits they would lose by waiting until the New Year to enlist.

The second opportunity offered in TODAY'S ARMY is education. A high school dropout recently earned his third college degree since he enlisted in the Army, nine years ago. Staff Sergeant Kenneth G. Strain, 27, just earned his master of Arts in business administration at the university of Puget Sound. Three degrees have been awarded in three years to Strain, through the Army's Bootstrap Program. TODAY'S ARMY selects about 1,300 enlistees for this educational program every year. Under Bootstrap, Strain was assigned fulltime to the University for two years to obtain a BA. He earned the BA and a master's degree in the same two years. Strain's first degree was an associate of arts.

Since graduation, Strain has taught management and supervisory development classes at Fort Steilacoom Community College and Fort Lewis' Old Reliable University, Wash. The Army Staff Sergeant is now teaching personnel administration at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind.

Who said it can't be done in TODAY'S ARMY?

Finally, lets look at the average military and average civilian pay. According to a recent Library of Congress study, current Army pay and benefits can amount to as much as $1,500 more than average civilian earning.

The study reported the average total compensation for a career soldier in 1973 is $12,062 including retirement credit. A non-career soldier receives $10,566. These figures include base pay, quarters and subsistence allowance and the tax advantage that accrues because quarters and subsistence allowances are not subject to federal income tax. They are based on the pay rates in effect before October increase.

who employs fewer than five persons in farming occupations. If at any one time during the calendar year an agricultural employer has in his employ five or more persons, all provisions of the Order will be applicable to that employer through that calendar year.

It also calls for farm employers hiring minors 16 and 17 years of age on a piece rate basis to pay such rates sufficient to yeild not less than $1.70 an hour to 80% of the minors 16 years of age or over, employed in agriculture in each pay period.

Agricultural employers hiring minors under 16 will be required to pay not less than $1.25 an hour.

The new Order also covers reporting of pay, permits and licenses for handicapped workers, meals and lodging, inspections, penalties, separability and filing of reports from employers.

Another first in the history of California was proposed by the Commission in establishing a Household Occupation Order which will cover domestic workers.

In recommending the new Minimum Wage Order, Todd said the Industrial Welfare Commission relied heavily upon the recommendations of the Wage Boards consisting of equal representation of employees and employers in various industries throughout the State, and from testimony during five days of public hearings.

The Commission has called for a response by the public to the proposals at public hearings to be held in Fresno on November 28, in Los Angeles on November 29, and in San Francisco on November 30.

The Commission has requested that written statements for their consideration be filed, preferably in 15 copies, not later than November 23 in San Francisco.

Such statements may be submitted to the Commission at the hearings.

FINISHED -- Children of La Mesa Village saw their dreams come true with construction of "Sand Castles" in the Navy housing area. The "postern" exit gate is featured in foreground and natural forest around family homes stands out in background.

HELPING HAND -- Company A of 14th Engineer Battalion has donated $2,078 to Combined Federal Campaign. Largest individual donation in 90-man company was made by Private Scott Ulrich, who gave $132.

Locals Warned On Lots

State Real Estate Commissioner Robert W. Karpe recently warned Californians owning out-of-state subdivision lots, to be cautious in their dealings with strangers posing as real estate agents asking for advance fees. California statutes require real estate licensees to have any advance programs approved prior to use.

Karpe said two Cleveland, Ohio men, arrested in Sacramento Thursday on felony and misdemeanor complaints contacted local residents through postcards and telephone calls saying they could sell "your" lot at a substantial profit and telling the lot owners of their future visit.

The scheme, Karpe said, could be national in scope. Neither of the two men arrested were licensed as California real estate agents, itself a misdemeanor.

Karpe said the two arrested men, Sanford Levin, 34 and Fran Sandusky, 41, contacted residents who own lots in Cape Coral and River Ranch Acres in Florida, and Rio Rico Subdivisions in Arizona by postcard and telephone calls telling them how they (D. Davis and Associates, Inc.) could sell their lots at big profits to foreign buyers. The Department of Real Estate staff discovered the men, representing Davis Corporation, were in Sacramento for a few days with a book of appointments. The District Attorney's office was notified and they nabbed the men in the act of collecting advance fees of $250 from Sacramentans who had formerly purchased these lots, many of which are of questionable value.

Karpe urges anyone who is contacted with an offer to help them to sell their lot to satisfy themselves the agent is licensed in California. In any event, if an advance fee is demanded by the agent, the lot owner should contact an office of the Department of Real Estate.

Advance fee scheme operators often move into a community for only a few days. In a short time they can bilk thousands of dollars from their "clients" and move to the next location. Their plan always calls for a retainer or advance fee.

Oilmen Want Rationing Now

Houston -- At last week's annual meeting here of the American Petroleum Institute, the National Petroleum Council -- and industry advisory group -- called for immediate rationing of gasoline and home heating oil.

Without such emergency measures, the council warned, there could be a decline of $48 billion in the gross national product during the first quarter of 1974 and unemployment might climb from its present 4.5 percent to 6 percent.

The council said that if the Arab nations' oil curtailment escalates from its present 2 million barrels a day to 3 million barrels a day, as expected by the first of the year, unemployment in the United States could go as high as 7.5 to 8 percent.
